The COB, Mike Varone, led all hands in the Pledge of Allegiance.

The Chaplain, Mickey Garverick, delivered the Invocation.

After a moment of silence, the Vice Commander (VCDR), Brian Haller, read the list of boats lost in the month of June. These were:

USS R-12 (SS-89)	Jun 12, 1943
USS Golet (SS-361)	Jun 14, 1944

NORTHERN VIRGINIA BASE MEMBER(S) WHO DEPARTED ON ETERNAL PATROL IN JUNE:

- Richard S. Lowry, Qualified on USS Ulysses S. Grant (SSBN-631), 1968. Departed on his Eternal Patrol on 24 June 2017
- William "Rod" Puffer, Holland Club and Lifetime USSVI Member. Qualified on USS Pickerel (SS-524), 1953. Departed on his Eternal Patrol on 20 June 2013.

The COB then rang the bell twice in remembrance of the 34 USSVI NOVA Base members on Eternal Patrol.

IN MEMORIAM: CAPT Frederick Joeseeph Kollmorgen, USN, Ret. – 24 May 2022; CDR Warren Gregory Branges, USN, Ret. – 24 May 2022

HISTORIAN: Woody Woodworth read a submarine history article on the USS Sculpin (SS-191): Due to its length, the USS Sculpin (SS-191) history is appended to the end of these minutes. After the reading, Joe Phoenix tearfully said that his uncle was one of the survivors of both the severe depth charging of the USS Sculpin (SS-191) and the sinking of the Japanese warship carrying half of the American POWs. He knew from his uncle that the ship's diving officer who had lost depth control and initially exposed the submarine to the Japanese surface ships went down with the sub out of shame and guilt.

- Howard Chatham, our Base Treasurer and MOAA member, announced that the Commonwealth of Virginia passed the military retired income tax reduction law on Friday, as well as passed a state budget. The Governor has not yet signed these passed bills into law yet.
 - There are three critical laws that are a part of the newly passed budget:
 - HB 1128 and SB 528 are compromised to create this passed bill. The benefit will begin with the tax year 2022. This means that when we file our Virginia taxes next year, we will see the 2022 benefit. It will reduce our taxable military retired pay by $10,000 in 2022, and progress in yearly $10,000 steps to a $40,000 reduction in year four for the 2025 taxes. The law requires the military retiree to be at least 55 years old to receive this benefit. A non-accountant has calculated that this will result in: 2022 gross income reduction of $10,000 leads to a reduced tax by $575; the 2023 gross income reduction of $20,000 leads to a reduced tax by $1150; the 2024 gross income reduction of $30,000 leads to a reduced tax by $1725; and the 2025 gross income reduction of $40,000 leads to a reduced tax of $2,300.
 - Simultaneously, the standard income tax deduction is raised for individual taxpayers from $4,500 to $8,000 and from $9,000 to $16,000 for families.
 - A tax rebate of $250 for individuals and $500 for families was added.
 - Additionally, the state grocery tax was eliminated, but the local tax option for 1% grocery tax remains.

SUBMARINE HISTORY

USS SCULPIN

During recent research for a historian presentation concerning the awarding of the Congressional Medal of Honor to Captain John Cromwell, the following account of the last day of the USS SCULPIN (SS -191) was identified as a possible additional presentation. This account was submitted to OP23C by Lt. George Brown Jr. USN upon his post-war repatriation as a prisoner of war. Lt. Brown was the senior surviving SCULPIN officer and was SCULPIN Engineering Officer and the battle station's diving officer during the last day. This complete interview comments of Lt. Brown, Jr. are located at the following link and page #s. https://issuu.com/hmsa/docs/ss-191_sculpin, pages 276-279.

“THE STORY OF THE LAST ENGAGEMENT OF THE USS SCULPIN AS SUBMITTED TO CAPTAIN HENSEL (OP23C) ON 1 OCTOBER 1945.

On the night of November 18th we had tracked a large convoy for some eight hours—at dawn we dove and went in to make a submerged attack. Just as we were in a position to shoot, the convoy (consisting of one freighter, five destroyers and one light cruiser) either spotted us or zigged normally. At any rate, they turned directly on us and came over us. The Captain ordered me to “take her down”, thus using negative tank, which made noise. I believe this outfit heard the Sculpin or was alerted, for the whole convoy speeded up. However, they did not drop any depth charges at this time. We stayed deep for an hour and at 0730 Captain Cromwell and Commander Connaway decided that because of the large escort this Maru was very important and we must go after it. Therefore, he ordered us to surface, which we did. However, we evidently did not take a good enough look for the Japs had left a “sleeper” (a large flotilla leader destroyer) which was about 6000 yards from us when we surfaced. We got the submarine down again by the time he came over to drop his first string. The damage received by the first depth charges was not unusual but disconcerting. An exhaust valve in the after engine room was ruptured and we started taking water in aft. Several sea valves were jarred off their seats and could not be made tight.

After about an hour or at 0830, he came over again, this time directly over us and dropped eighteen charges. The hands of the depth gauges fell off in front of my face. The pressure gauges near the diving station commenced flooding and there was other minor damage about the ship. The weather conditions were perfect for a destroyer, sound and echo ranging highly effective. There was a straight line on the Bathythermograph down to 300 feet; our evasion tactics were next to useless on that day.

At 0930 he came over again and dropped another string. This added more minor damage but we still had the submarine under control, in spite of the large up angle (13 degrees or more) and much weight in the boat. By now it was taking 100 or 110 turns to maintain our depth. At this time we detected a rain squall in the distance and headed for it. With the aid of this surface disturbance we shook the destroyer for over half an hour. At this time we decided to pump bilges and endeavor to regain diving trim. However, neither the drain nor the trim pump would take suction. Captain Connaway then had me relieved from the Diving Station so that I could inspect and report damage throughout the boat. Upon inspection I found the after engine room flooded to such an extent that I believed it unwise to attempt to place a bubble in #4 M.B.T. (which would have aided the trim considerably) because the flow of water forward might short main motor leads. We decided to bail the water forward to another compartment until we could trim the ship without endangering main motors.

While we were running up a bucket brigade the temporary diving officer broached the ship. However, no one could be blamed for this as the depth gauge was stuck at 170 feet, and, as I mentioned before, the pressure gauges around the diving station were all flooded out. When we stuck our nose out the destroyer saw us and came over again, dropping another string which tore our radio transmitter from the bulkhead and smashed the receiver, smashed light bulbs and severely damaged outboard vents in both torpedo rooms. We momentarily lost depth control and were down over 500 feet before regaining control. The steering mechanism had been damaged to such an extent that it was next to impossible for exhausted men to operate the wheel in hand power. At this time our evasion tactics were about at a standstill. The heat in the boat was terrific, having made a full power run the previous night all the engine heat had been sealed in the boat with us. Having vented negative two or three times and having so many leaks, the pressure in the boat was over 5". However, we decided to try and hold out for one more string, which we received at about 1230. At that time the forward and aft torpedo rooms reported cracks around the torpedo tubes. The sound heads were driven up into the boat sheering the holding down clamps. Thus were now without "ears". It required 170 turns to maintain depth, the battery was about shot and it was six hours till sundown, so Commander Connaway decided to surface and fight it out with the destroyer, and while the gun crew was engaging the destroyer the rest of the crew who wished could abandon ship.

Commander Connaway had been so calm, resourceful, and persevering during this five hours of sever depth charge, that it was hard for the crew to realize that the situation was as serious as it was. Commander Connaway said that it was a heartbreaking decision to have to make, but that he realized the Sculpin could not take another string of depth charges. Therefore, he felt he owed his crew, who had fought so well, the chance to abandon since the Sculpin was now completely shattered.

As he started up to the conning tower, he ordered me to make sure the Sculpin was scuttled, in case we lost the one-sided engagement with the destroyer. He still maintained his calm, collected, courageous manner which inspired his crew to carry on gallantly in the face of overwhelming odds. We surfaced about 1330, the gun crew led by Lieut. "Joe" Defrees manned the gun and opened fire on the destroyer. Commander Connaway stood on the bridge conning his ship into the most favorable position. Lt J. N. Allen was in the conning tower relaying the skipper's orders to the wheel. Lt.(jg) George Embury manned his radar in the conning tower and relayed fire control data to the gun.

There were at this time some men in the Control Room who asked what they might do. I ordered them to the torpedo rooms to make ready the tubes. I intended to fire a spread from the Control Room. However, the Japanese, with their superior fire control equipment, soon found the range and put two shells through the conning tower. These killed Lt. Allen and Lt. Embury, as well as Commander Connaway on the bridge. Flying fragments also killed Lt. Defrees on the gun.

At this time, I considered it unwise to wait longer for scuttling operations because the next shell might damage the hydraulic system, thus making it impossible to operate the vents.

I ordered "Emergency Speed" and when answered ordered "Abandon Ship". I waited one minute by the clock before ordering Philip Joseph Gabrunas, CMM (who had gallantly elected to remain with me and man a station not normally his) to open the vents. Before ordering Gabrunas to "open the Vents", I informed Capt. Cromwell, who was in the Control Room, of my intentions. He told me to go ahead, that he could not come with us for he was afraid the information he possessed might be injurious to shipmates if the Japanese made him reveal it by torture.

As I left the Conning Tower door water was coming waist deep over the sill, and I am certain no one left the ship after me. I last saw Gabrunas going up the conning tower hatch. He either became fouled in wreckage or was killed by machine gun fire.

I collected the men in the water into one group. Those of us who were strong swimmers aided the wounded and weak swimmers.

The destroyer picked us up around 1500 and took us into Truk Atoll. There were 41 survivors at this point (3 officers and 38 men). After ten days of alternate beating with clubs and questioning at Truk we were divided into two groups and embarked on two aircraft carriers for passage to Japan.

On Dec. 2nd the U.S.S. Sailfish sank one of the carriers and as a result we lost 2 officers and 18 men. George Rocek MoMM1/c was the sole American survivor. One officer and 20 men arrived at Ofuna, the secret intimidation and interrogation camp of the Japanese Navy.

It is also my opinion that the following named officers and men displayed outstanding valor and perseverance in the face of overwhelming odds.

Captain John Cromwell, USN, for refusing personal safety to protect his shipmates and countrymen still engaged in war and operation at sea.

Lt. Nelson John Allen, USN, for his courage, leadership and devotion to duty.

Lt. Joseph Defrees, USN, for his courage, leadership and devotion to duty. It was his gun crew that held the destroyer at bay during scuttling and abandoning operations.

Lt. (j.g.) George Embury, USNR, the Radar Officer for outstanding courage and devotion to duty.

Ensign Max Fiedler, USNR, who preferred death in his ship to capture.

Ensign Charles Goldsmith, USNR, Ensign Worth Gamel, USNR, Weldon E. Moore CSM USN, For their leadership, courage, and devotion to duty, both before and after capture. They were instrumental in saving many lives of those struggling in the water before being taken aboard the Japanese destroyer as well as a great comfort and aid to me during our trying days at Truk.

W. E. Moore, CSM USN, H. T. Thomas, TMM1/c USN, W. R. Berry, TMM1/c USN, D. J. White, MoMM2/c USN, R. O. Wyatt, GM2/c USN, J. N. Baker F1/c USN, Ricketts EF MoMM2/c USN, Milbourne H.S. Jr. F1/c USN, who so gallantly manned the 3" gun in the face of such overwhelming odds, to keep the destroyer at bay while their shipmates abandoned and scuttled.

Harper, J. H. TMM3/c USN, Arneith E. S2/c, Pitser, C.E. TMM2/c USN, Parker, W. H. S1/c USN, Rouke, J.P. SN3/c USN, Colman, C. S. MoMM1/c USN, Gillet, A.B. F1/c USN, who so gallantly manned the 20 mm and light machine guns in the face of such overwhelming odds, thus facilitating scuttling and abandoning operations.

Gabrunas, P. J. CMoMM USN, for voluntarily manning an unassigned station and materially aiding in the scuttling of the Sculpin.

Undoubtedly there are others of this fine crew who carried more than their load during those difficult hours, however it is impossible for one officer to observe the entire crew who behaved so splendidly.

Respectfully submitted,
/s/ George Estabrook Brown, Jr."
